POLITICAL PARADE

By CLEM WHITAKER

Private Pete Oleson of the United States Marines, a hard-bitten veteran of Guadalcanal, who writes as he fights and pulls no punches, is the actual author of this column, although he doesn't know it—and probably will be astonished to learn that he blossomed into a political columnist at home while resting between battles out in the South Pacific.

From Guadalcanal, in the heat of battle, Private Oleson wrote a letter to his former co-workers at the Marinship Yards near Sausalito, where he was employed until he enlisted in the Marines. It is a letter which might do more to cure absenteeism than a special act of Congress or a directive from the President—and it deserves to be read by every worker in every war plant, by every legislator and government official dealing with the problem of lazy layoffs, and by every American on the home front. The letter follows:

Dear Gang:

I've wanted to write you for some time but for the past ten days our gang has been in hell. We chased the Japs across the River and held our ground against mortars, dive-bombers, artillery, snipers, bayonets and belly knives. Eight of us had to lay in jungle slime up to our mouths for a whole day because the Japs had the bead on us from two sides. Charlie, next to me, whispered, "I think I can make it," and raised his head for a cautious look. I saw him grin as he drew his Garand forward. That was all. Thank God he died instantly.

A Jap mortar almost got us when a shell exploded about forty feet away. We practically dug our graves that time. I spit blood for an hour. After nightfall the seven of us quietly slithered out of that stagnant pool like crocodiles. The Japs knew we were flanking them and fired wildly. There was about six inches of water and when Ed got hit in the spine with shrapnel, I think he purposely went under. A single sound would have told the Japs our location. About the time you fellows on the swing-shift were knocking off to go home we hooked up with our platoon again, gave the Captain the exact position of the Japs. A runner crawled to the rear and in fifteen minutes our artillery finished off that pocket of rice-eaters.

An hour after dawn we had our first food in twenty-four hours. Dead tired, we tried to sleep on some palm fronds. But a bunch of Zeros came over and spit at us. Louis was carrying some canteens of water and his number was up. Sometimes, I wish every fellow I know could spend just one day and one terrifying night out here

Funeral Rites Today for Chris Boll

Funeral services are being held this afternoon from the Rutherford Funeral Home for Chris Boll, resident of Railroad avenue, who was struck by an automobile Thursday evening, and died Saturday from the effects of his injuries.

Boll, who was 81 years of age, a native of Germany, came out from between parked cars on the main business block on Campbell avenue after dark, dressed in dark clothes, and as he was quite feeble, the driver of the car was unable to avoid hitting him. Deputy Coroner Pat Battle investigated for Coroner Spaulding.

Services were delayed awaiting the arrival of his daughter, Mrs. Florence Stickney of Bridgeport, Conn.

Rev. J. H. Bennett is in charge of the services with Mrs. Virginia Rutherford organist. Interment is in Santa Clara City cemetery.

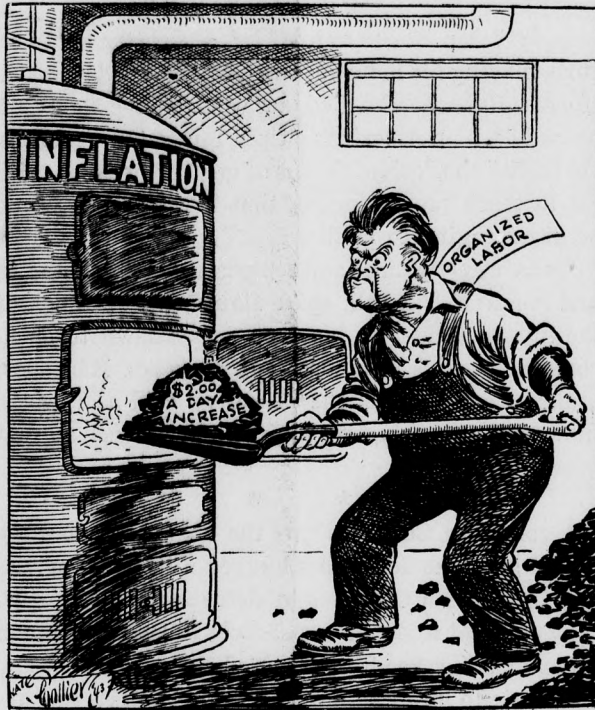

with us. There would be more aching bellies and not so much bellyaching. The only whistles on Guadalcanal are the screaming kind that go overhead.

Remember me to the gang in the yard. So long and good luck.

P. S.—Was just talking with the pilot of a B-17 that arrived from the States less than an hour ago. He said that one day last week there was quite a heavy rain and that 1,064 shipyard workers didn't work. I wish he hadn't told me that.

"TO DIE FREE MEN"

"We will, in defiance to every hazard . . . die free men rather than live as slaves." So spoke Thomas Jefferson in the Declaration of the Causes of Taking Up Arms in 1775. So speaks the voice of the Nation today!

On April 13, we celebrate the 200th anniversary of the birth of this brilliant American, who, at 33 years of age, authored the Declaration of Independence. Later he was to serve as governor of Virginia, as a member of the Continental Congress, and twice as President of the United States. But beyond all this, Thomas Jefferson had the vision to foresee the part America was to play in world history—the measures it must take to survive.

He was a versatile man, a humanitarian, a profound thinker. Because of him, we understand the essential nature, in democracy, of freedom of press, of speech, of religion. He it was who saw the naturalness of a "Bill of Rights" in government, in which "I have a right to nothing which another has a right to take away." He knew the vital nature of free enterprise . . . "Agriculture, manufacture, commerce and navigation, the four pillars of our prosperity, are the most thriving when left free to individual enterprise."

"But," declared Jefferson in 1786, "by far the most important bill in our whole code is that for the diffusion of knowledge among the people. No other sure foundation can be devised for the preservation of freedom and happiness . . . Establish and improve the law for educating the common people," he urged. "Preach a crusade against ignorance."

Let us refresh ourselves at the fountain of his clarity, in these days of trial, for we are engaged in what may well be a last struggle for the survival of democracy. This may be a last opportunity our civilization will have—we dare not lose—we cannot, if we remember what America stands for.

INTERVIEW WITH "MISSIMO"

At one of the few functions in her whole national tour for which every detail was not planned and directed well in advance, 100 representatives of the California press met Madame Chiang Kai-shek a few days ago and bombarded her with questions which most world leaders today would have parried or ducked completely.

Reports of those present at the San Francisco interview agree that tougher queries seldom have been leveled at a world figure in news conference. Here is a sample of the difficult questions laid in the "Missimo's" satin lap as she sat, a tiny figure in a great gold chair of the fabulous Palace Hotel Comstock Room:

"What do your people think of the Negro people, of our newspapers and of our war effort?" asked a representative of the Negro press.

"Do you know," replied Madame Chiang, earnestness shining in her eyes, "we think of you as Americans. And of your papers as American newspapers. We do not differentiate in those things, and we are supremely aware and deeply thankful for the wonderful work of this country and all its people in the war."

"What precisely does China want from America?" queried a young reporter. And quickly the answer came: "Precisely what America wants from China—understanding. My people do not want money nor gifts; I am not here to beg!"

Accepted political procedure has brought complete candor too close to extinction, and reporters ordinarily hear only what the interviewee wants publicized, whether or not it expresses his deepest convictions.

Madame Chiang's reaction to their toughest questions carried a whiff of sincerity all too unfamiliar to hard-working newsmen, and won their real admiration.

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF

In Sergei Rachmaninoff, a great musician lived among us, whose compositions will remain with those of the masters of all time. On a bronze plaque in the Imperial Conservatory of Music in Moscow, Rachmaninoff's name, as a graduate of the school, inspired many a younger musician.

In 1917, Mr. Rachmaninoff left Russia, never to return, making his home in America—and he loved California. But when he died last week, at the age of 69, he had been an American citizen for just two months. He had all the "eccentricities of genius," was too critical to teach music, feeling that his attitudes would be discouraging to pupils.

As a concert pianist and composer, he is best known and admired. The tall, spare figure, with a touch of the mystic Orient in his face, was known to spell-bound audiences for more than 40 years. His music could be as warm as the sun or as cold as Russian snows, but it was always interesting. His was a great talent.

A corpse in Congress was the Ruml plan to "pay as you go." The democrats hugged a first major victory in the 78th Congress by defeating it 215 to 198. They charged it would "mushroom 100,000 war-made millionaires," erase $10 billion of government assets, contribute to inflation, injure national morale in wartime, and redistribute wealth in a way that the well-to-do would be enriched. The thumbs on its monument point down. So we're still paying the next installment on our income tax, unless a "Daniel comes to judgment" between now and June!

Down in the Solomons and on the African coasts the Crocodile Boat or tank lighter played a most important role in landing our invasion armies. These self-propelled, light . . . fast boats haul tanks, artillery and other equipment from the big ships off-shore to the beach heads.

We need more and more of them, for they are essential to the successful operation of the war. They are made in several sizes from small fifty-footers, costing about $2,400 to the big 500-tonners costing around $37,000. Your purchase of War Bonds every payday will help pay for them.

Think twice before you travel on the Train

Unless your trip is really essential, you'll do your country a service by staying home

Transportation is a key war industry. The war load on the railroads is mounting steadily.

Southern Pacific trains are very crowded—not comfortable as they used to be.

Military and other essential travel comes first. And when these essential travelers have been taken care of there is really no room on the trains for people traveling unnecessarily.

Unless you absolutely have to travel, we advise you to stay home.

Thanks for your cooperation.

THE BOOK MARK

by marty

"Between the Thunder and the Sun" by Vincent Sheean.

Many have been the books written about the war, about the causes of war, the inevitability of war, the after effects, and historical perspective, but it is difficult to choose one today that would cover each of the above mentioned issues. However, Vincent Sheean has done even more than cover each of those issues; he has elaborated on each phase with his personal reactions and experiences gained by being on the spot when things happened.

It is to Austria first that the author takes his reader—in the year 1935—and relates, in superb Sheean style, the elegance, the beauty and inspiring performance of the operas. This part of the book is, in my humble opinion, laden with love, beauty, fear, sadness, gaiety and distrust, predicting the tragic fate for the beautiful city of Vienna in the masterful operatic events.

France, the Riviera, Cannes and Paris are on the itinerary and each country and historic city is described in momentary phrases as to pre-war activities and results of attack. The tragedy of it all for the author was that in this seething, rolling, mounting cloud of thunder that hung over all of Europe he saw the inevitableness of war for his own country. It was his good fortune to have been acquainted with those endowed with power, Mr. Churchill among them, and to be able to determine, first hand, the course of events.

Into Italy and out again he went, observing and absorbing all available information, political as well as social. He was in London during their most horrible hours when bombs rained day and night from the skies. China, Java and other Far Eastern countries were also visited by him, and his journey back to America was concurrent with the attack by the Japanese on Pearl Harbor.

If you have read any one of this author's previous books, "Personal History" or "Not Peace But A Sword" you will find again in this book that power of personal observation, the exquisiteness of descriptive detail both of scenery and personages that presage greatness.

"Soldiers of Service"

In wartime, America turns to its telephones. The daily volume of calling is the greatest we have ever handled.

The men and women of our company want to see these calls go through with the greatest satisfaction to everyone. Especially do they want to give the fastest possible service to those who need speed to help win the war.

Since more switchboards and other telephone equipment are not being made due to military demands upon materials, the co-operation of our patrons is deeply appreciated.

War-busy centers should be called by Long Distance only when absolutely necessary.

The "Soldiers of Service" at the telephone switchboards, on poles, trucks, at desks or wherever duty finds them, will continue to do their level best to see that you get friendly, courteous and efficient service.

Hazards in Oven Canning Outlined

Berkeley, April 8—Use of the oven method for canning is one of the prime causes of spoiled home canned foods, according to Dr. William V. Cruess, professor of fruit technology and chemist in the Experiment Station at the University of California College of Agriculture.

Speaking at a state conference on home food preservation he pointed out hazards which may arise from heating jars of food in an oven instead of the usually recommended pressure cooker or pot.

"First, as air is a very poor conductor of heat," he indicated, "jars and contents heat extremely slowly and very unevenly. Fruits canned by this method may not be heated enough to prevent browning in the jars by enzyme action."

"Secondly, the contents do not rise above the boiling point, 212 degrees F., regardless of what the oven thermometer may say, because when the boiling point is reached the natural laws of physics prevent the temperature from rising. Non-acid foods should reach 239-250 degrees F. to remove the danger of botulism, fatal food poisoning. Also jars if sealed may burst, with possible injury to the housewife."

"We are working on methods of overcoming these defects but are not yet ready to decide whether the oven can or cannot be used. At present we say 'no, don't use it.' Perhaps later we shall find a way to make it safe."

Clean Milking Machine

If butterfat is allowed to remain on the rubber parts of a milking machine, the rubber becomes oil soaked and loses its elasticity. Cold water should be used to remove milk from the rubber immediately after milking.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

President Roosevelt's suggestions for meeting the farm labor crisis in the United States—deferment of farm workers, the furloughing of rural draftees back home for the harvest season and the recruiting of an army of school children to work on farms during their summer vacations—may be of considerable aid, nationally, but they are wholly inadequate to cope with California's emergency agricultural problem.

C. C. Teague, president of the Agricultural Council of California and one of the state's ablest farm leaders, who was sent to Washington by Governor Warren to speed up federal aid in dealing with the critical labor shortage here, told newsmen in the national capital that not less than 50,000 Mexican farm workers will be needed in California this season.

Mr. Teague's statement was based on sound knowledge of conditions in California—and it is to be hoped that Washington will recognize, in time, that half-way measures will not do, if this state's vast agricultural plant is to make its full contribution to the food for victory program.

California's farm manpower problem is much more acute than that in most other states—and this is not said with any thought of minimizing the seriousness of the problem nationally. A major factor in aggravating the problem here was the fact that thousands of Japanese agricultural workers were removed from the state at the outbreak of war. As most of the Japanese farm workers were concentrated in this state, that created a drain of agricultural manpower in California in addition to all the other conditions which were draining away farm labor in the country as a whole.

Again, California agriculture was harder hit by loss of its workers to defense industries than any other section of the country, due to this state's leadership in war production. In no other state was there the wholesale exodus of farm workers to the cities which occurred here, although the farming industry generally lost many of its workers to war plants.

The deferment of farm workers, of course, will be of aid to California, as to all other agricultural states, but unhappily this is largely a case of locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen. Many of the experienced farmers and skilled farm hands are already gone and all that can be done now by deferment of farm workers is to avoid making a bad situation worse.

Yehudi Menuhin Concert Slated For April 30

Yehudi Menuhin is now on the second lap of his bomber-flight to Britain, on which he left early in March at the invitation of the British War Department. Menuhin's San Jose recital, postponed from April 9 to April 30, was one of the few recitals which the famous violinist did not have to cancel in order to serve his country in playing for the RAF camps.

Enthusiastic cables are coming to Yehudi's parents in Los Gatos, telling of how the violinist plays three and four concerts daily, dashing from tion worse. The furloughing of soldiers and sailors to assist in farm harvests, as suggested by the President, may or may not be of material aid in meeting the crisis, dependent on how it is handled. If farm boys are returned to the farm, under conditions which will permit them to stay until crops are harvested, they can be of real assistance. But if city-born and city reared troops are sent into the harvest fields, while they can be used for picking fruit and other comparatively unskilled work, they will not fill the need for trained farm hands. The same handicap exists in using school children to supplement the farm labor supply, although a volunteer school army, properly supervised, can certainly help, and should be encouraged.

California's problem, however, is both too big and too immediate for part-way measures. The need here is for experienced farm workers in great number. If our state department in Washington moves with determination and dispatch, an army of 50,000 Mexican farm workers undoubtedly can be organized in cooperation with the Mexican government and brought to California in time to meet the crisis this season. And if that is done, it will be a major factor in relieving the food crisis both for our own country and for our allies, as this state has greater productive capacity than any other state in the Union—if it has the men to work the fields!

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood. At-the-table-meals that require NO Food Coupons

Come out of the kitchen. Cook at the table with appliances that you may have neglected of late. Use your waffle iron or sandwich grill instead of your frying pan now that meat is a shopping problem. Why not serve cinnamon waffles, orange waffles, lemon waffles or waffles topped with home made strawberry jam? Sounds yummy, doesn't it? Use your sandwich grill or hot plate to make golden-brown French toast or fried milk toast topped with a sprinkle of sugar or cinnamon.

For helpful hints on care and use of your table appliances see pages 17, 18 and 19 of the P. G. and E. Booklet—"The Lady of the House and Her Mechanical Servants." Your free copy of this 32-page booklet is waiting for you at any office of this company. Come in and ask for it.
